

JOCKEYS SPINNED FUEL FOR FOUNDRY LEADS ITS RIVALS

GREATEST TURF RIVALS ARE MILLER AND RADKTE

All Race Followers Deeply Interested in Their Duel for First Honors—Outsiders Have Good Chance in Suburban.

By J. S. A. MACDONALD.

NEW YORK, June 9.—In the old days it used to be "Shupper" Garrison and Fred Turrel at each other's throats in a three-way duel of jockey rivalry.

Just now metropolitan racegoers are looking on at an intensely interesting fight for supremacy between Jockey Herman Radtke and Jockey Walter Miller. In fact, New York is not alone concerned, for the strife of mastery between these two little men is something of an international affair. Miller being the hero of the Californians, while the trainers hereabouts and those from off the New Orleans and Hot Springs racing ground say there is none other like Radtke. So bitter has become the feeling between the two jockeys that they do not now exchange the word of day as they meet, while it is no unusual thing to find bookmakers in the ring making a sideshow quotation against Miller beating Radtke, or vice versa, while doing a general business on the result of the running of the horses.

Everybody Interested.

Whenever the two youngsters appear under silks in the same race a great scurrying to the railside follows for a view of the tit between them. Inspiring are some of the finishes they put up, while the women regulars in the grandstand—the riders are split favorites there—all but resort to hollering in order to emphasize a loyalty to their hero. Never before has the racing world witnessed anything like the heated temper of this rousing competitive fight between Miller and Radtke.

Miller is a product of South Brooklyn, N. Y., from whence came Terry McGovern, the former featherweight champion, whose recent battle here with Jimmy Britt served to display the gameness for which the sons of the district are noted; Willie Keeler, the great batsman, and many another noted celebrity of the world of sport. He was apprenticed to the stable of Billy Stanton three years ago, and after two winters of riding in California and a season here last year, he came to hand early this spring about the most finished output of the jockey-making mill one might care to see. Miller is eighteen years of age, weighs 100 pounds, and will earn for his employers upward of $30,000 this year, about a quarter of which will find its way to his own personal bank account.

Miller All-Round Athlete.

At the outset, Stanton disposed of his contract on the boy's services to Trainer "Tom" Welsh, acting for the new-castle stable, in which Andrew Miller, steward of the Jockey Club, Blair Painter and Frank Bishop, of Pittsburgh, Pa., are jointly interested. It was the very best thing for Miller inasmuch as he had the pick of the finest horses owned by the millionaires friendly with Andrew Miller.

Miller is a short, squatly chap but with a natural deftness for anything of an athletic turn. For instance, early this week, "Tom" Welsh, when discussing the riding prodigy, said: "Here is something about Miller. Before he took to race riding he was the best kid ball player in Brooklyn, and no boy of his weight could outbox him. Then, again, he was only a boy skating down at Coney Island three nights until he was found spinning wheels and fancy tricks. In other words, good jockeys and high-class athletes are born, not made."

Radtke From Germany.

Radtke is a lean-faced, tall, dignified sort of boy. The money-mad Rainey bought the contract on his services from J. O. Keene, of Lexington, Ky., for $25,000 last April. He is under the direct tutelage of "Bud" May. Like Miller he is a deft manipulator of the race horse in action. With hands as soft as a woman, with intuition akin to that of an inspired artist, this boy can make horses win which would be 50 to 1 outside chances in the hands of another jockey. He is a native of Boegin, Germany, and was discovered by Keene two years ago.

A winter season in California really started Radtke to greatness. The successive defeats of the $45,000 De Mund when ridden by Radtke caused a momentary depreciation of his stock, but now the public race betters are with him again. Last Monday at Belmont Park the two rivals engaged in a hot chase for honors. Miller rode four winners and two seconds, but Radtke won the stake event of the day. This was with James H. Keene's filly, Court Dress, in the Gaiety Stakes.

Radtke outdistanced Miller, who had the mount on Barbary Belle, but a half hour later the adherents of Miller had a chance to laugh back at the followers of Radtke, for Miller on Mintia clearly outgeneraled the Rainey jockey on Entree in a stretch duel which brought Radtke to his knees. From now on, the striving of these star jockeys will stand as one of the big sideights of the routine of racing hereabouts.

Suburban Open Race.

With the Suburban Handicap—the most coveted prize in the turf calendar—to be run within the next few days (or, to be correct, on Thursday, June 21), devotees of racing from San Francisco, Cal., to New York, N. Y., are just now rubbing their eyes and basking themselves in the probable outcome of the exciting struggle. A Tokalon may win the Suburban Handicap this year, for, like the recent Brooklyn Handicap, the field for the approaching Suburban Handicap is distinctly meager in quality, and likely as not a rank outside selling player may come up, after the class horses have roughed themselves into the ground, and win by a fluke. There you have the sum and substance of the $20,000 Brooklyn Handicap on May 21 at Gravesend.

Do not scout the possibility of the very same thing occurring in the Suburban Handicap—in fact, the remotest chance of Tokalon is going to make thousands of spectators chance a flyer on the tail-end choices in whatever the future betting may be had on the race—"little future betting" being said advisedly, since the postal authorities at Washington, have given the projectors of the "KID" Weller future book on the Brooklyn Handicap to understand that no further transmission of bets on horse races through the mails will be tolerated.

Trio of Classic Handicaps.

The Suburban Handicap, like the Brooklyn Handicap, is worth $20,000, this amount of money being divided among the owners of the first three horses. These fixtures are the two of a trio, the Brighton Handicap, the richest of them all, it being $25,000 in value standing as third of the series. They are at a mile and a quarter for horses, three-year-olds and up, the Brooklyn Handicap being the feature event at the annual opening of the Brooklyn Jockey Club's spring meeting at Gravesend, the Suburban Handicap doing the same service for the midsummer meeting of the Coney Island Jockey Club at Sheepshead Bay, and the Brighton Handicap lending the hurrah effect on the first day of the always welcome meeting at Brighton Beach, down by the rolling ocean turf.

The running of any one of them is the signal for an exodus of anywhere from 4,000 to 7,000 persons from the city to the Long Island racing grounds. The turf is keeping pace with the growing life of the country and each year sees a greater number of racegoers in attendance. For instance, 65,000 paid admissions were recorded at Belmont Park on Decoration Day this season—a record crowd for an American race track—and fully 50,000 admirers of the thoroughbred will probably look on the finish of the Suburban Handicap.

Artful May Not Start.

At this time, Harry Payne Whitney seems to have the best chance of winning, for he has the wonderful three-year-old, Burgomaster, and the great mare, Artful, both the progeny of Hambleton, entered, and in point for the race. Artful won the Brighton Handicap last year, but is said to be not quite herself just now. She may be withdrawn.

On the other hand, Burgomaster strikes one as another Sysonby, the more you get to know of his capabilities. Originally assigned 16 pounds by the handicapper, he must take a twelve-pound penalty for winning the Belmont Stakes at Belmont Park and the Carters Stakes at Gravesend. With Burgomaster, it is a case of taking a good big coat against a good small but older horse, Dandelion. The latter has cooled out of his driving finish with Tokalon in the Brooklyn Handicap and will come to the Suburban Handicap as a dark horse, though doubtfully candidate. Though but about fifteen horses will face the starter, the following still remain eligible:

Coast Tracks to Resume.

It will be cheering news to the regulars of the turn who follow the horses from the summer grounds to the winter racing course to know that the sport will be again actively conducted at San Francisco, Cal. It is a long fly from the present moment to the first snow flurry and the annual exodus to the South and Far West, and will have entirely recovered from the recent disaster. The humor of the city is not now for racing and theaters, but next autumn it will be different.

President "Tom" Williams, writing to a friend here in New York, this past week, intimates that Emeryville will open on scheduled time, and race as in previous winter seasons. He wrote from Hopland, Cal., the home town of Messrs. Burns & Waterhouse's Candelaria stud farm. "I am in very good health, and shall be with my turf friends in New York along about October," he writes.

GOOD PRICES FOR HUNTERS.

LONDON, June 9.—Hunters are commanding excellent prices this year. Mr. Burke's consignment from county Tipperary and the Oakley Hunt horses running to very high prices indeed. Every one of Mr. Burke's twelve lots changed hands. Hamman, a bay, by The Baron, going at $1,500. The Buck, a brown, by Noble Chieftain, at $1,500. South Lodge, a chestnut, by Curfew, at $1,000. And Thatch, a bay, by Helio, at $1,000. Esme Arkwright's stud, from the Oakley country, numbered twenty-six, two bays, Water and Harlestone, fetching $1,500 and $1,000, respectively.

A GOOD DOG.

It is related by Prof. Bell that when a friend of his was traveling abroad, he one morning took his purse to see if it contained sufficient change for a day's jaunt he intended making. He departed from his lodgings, leaving a trusted dog behind. When he dined he took out his purse to pay and found he had lost a gold coin from it. On returning home in the evening the servant informed him that the dog seemed very ill, as he could not induce him to eat anything. He went at once to his favorite, and as soon as he entered the room the faithful creature ran to him, deposited the gold coin at his feet and then devoured the food placed before him with great eagerness. The truth was that the gentleman had dropped the coin in the morning. The dog had picked it up and kept it in his mouth, fearing even to eat lest he should lose his master's property before an opportunity was afforded him to restore it. Chambers' Journal.

FOURTEEN PRIZES FOR AUTO RACES

Meeting at Benning Next Saturday Offers Many Attractions—Heavy Cars Arouse Interest.

With the day of the big automobile races at Benning less than a week off the preparations are now nearly complete.

The eight events with a long list of entries are expected to be the biggest affair of the kind south of New York. In the events which bring out the fifty and sixty horsepower cars experienced out-of-town drivers will be the pilots. These races, in which the cars have met again and again in battle royal, with the victory constantly changing from one car to another, always prove exciting.

There are fourteen handsome prize cups for the seven automobile events and three for the motor cycle race. Cops have been put up by The Times, Post, and Star, R. Harris & Co., Galt & Co., Charles O. Brill, manager of the Villa Flora Club, and Frank H. Edmunds, optician, a local automobile enthusiast. The prizes will be placed in an F street show window for part of the week.

The track is being put in first-class condition with heavy rollers. This process is greatly aided by the cars which are being tuned up on the track.

The Marine Band, under the personal direction of Lieut. Santelmann, will furnish the music for the occasion.

HARVARD PUTS BRUSH TO PENNSYLVANIANS

Quakers Touched Castle Bu' Four Times—Fielding of Both Teams Was Brilliant.

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., June 9.—Harvard this afternoon defeated the University of Pennsylvania in what will probably be the last game of ball played between the two universities, for some years at least, winning 4 to 0.

Castle proved master of the situation throughout and kept the Pennsylvania batsmen guessing. The four hits secured by the visitors were of the scratch order with the lone exception of Hare's triple, but even with this Pennsylvania was unable to get a man over the rubber.

Hay, although not batted hard, was in poor trim, his free tickets to first, in the form of wide ones and hitting the batsmen and Hare's two passed balls were responsible for Harvard's four runs more than anything else. Both teams fielded brilliantly. Harvey's sensational catch of Hay's terrific slash over his head in the third, apparently a sure homer, was the feature. Score:

Foundry, in the Sunday School League, fought the weather and finally won yesterday from Plutus by an eyelash, just pulling under with a wire winner at the last minute, with a whitewash of the Metropolitans.

The Mets' inability to put on the Foundry when they were anxious for nothing else, made amusement for the small crowd which hung on, despite a bevy of storms, plain drizzle, wind, and finally the real sloppy goods.

Hutchinson pitched great ball and should have let the Mets down without a hit. In the fourth with two strikes on Frye, and no balls, he took a chance and put the ball over. Frye connected and put a two-bagger. Bryan, who leads his team with the stick, helped his cause along with two more bingles.

RACING IS KILLED IN KANSAS CITY

KANSAS CITY, Mo., June 9.—The racing game is dead in Missouri. The criminal court this morning found Charles Oldham, a bookmaker, guilty of receiving bets at Elm Ridge race track and fined him $300.

The Missouri Legislature two years ago passed a law against the receiving or registering of bets at race tracks. Three weeks ago a race meeting was held here for the purpose of testing the law. Bets were received at the track and registered in Kansas City, Kan.

The grand jury indicted Oldham and the trial has resulted in a conviction. Dr. J. S. Gardner, president of the Elm Ridge Race Track Association, was acquitted. Oldham will appeal to the supreme court.

HE SHIPPED A HOLE.

Many queer things have been shipped from one part of the country to another, but it has remained for an old soldier of Iowa to break the record by having shipped to him from South Carolina the hole through which he made the thrilling escape which to this day has puzzled some of the Confederate guards. The hole was cut out and presented to the major, who had it shipped North, and it now occupies a conspicuous place in his elegant drawing room, along with costly curios from abroad.—Chicago Chronicle.

CRACK SHOOTERS FROM ALL STATES

Sea Girt Rifle Match To Be National In Scope.

PRACTICE FOR GUARDSMEN

Schooling Expected to Be of Value in Improving Soldier Marksman.

The War Department is making arrangements for the next national rifle match which is to be held at Sea Girt, N. J., beginning September 4. Unusual efforts are being made to secure the attendance of a team from each State in the Union as well as from Porto Rico, Hawaii, and the Philippines. It is improbable that there will be any team from the Philippines, however, although at one time it looked as though arrangements had practically been completed for the attendance of a team from the islands, but it was believed that the expense of bringing them from the Philippines would be so large as to lead to unfavorable criticism.

Accurate rifle shooting is calculated by experts of the department to count as 85 points out of ten in estimating the efficiency of a soldier on the line of battle and holds that while the teams from the States may not win the prizes the members would be brought into contact with the finest military rifle shots in the world and thus be enabled to gather information and ideas relative to shooting which it would be impossible to obtain under any other circumstances.

Such information would be carried back to their homes to be disseminated to other members of the National Guard of these States. This would undoubtedly cause many others to take an interest in rifle practice and directly promote a greater interest in such practice and incidentally in all other matters relating to the National Guard.

Best Shots in the World.

Commenting on this matter a member of the National Board for the Promotion of Rifle Practice, which has charge of the national matches, said:

"At the breaking out of the Spanish-American war the members of our small regular army were, as a class, the finest body of military rifle shots in the world, and when an enemy showed his head or body at a distance of 400 or 500 yards and even much farther he was generally put out of action. On the other hand our men charged over open ground to the Spanish rifle pits with comparatively few casualties because the Spaniards had never been taught to shoot. This fine shooting on the part of the regular army was due, mainly, to the competitions which the officers and men had attended."

Preliminary Competitions.

"It is advisable that each State and Territory which decides to be represented at the national match should hold a preliminary competition two or three months in advance, that the best shots may be selected. Every man chosen should be willing to obligate himself to follow the necessary practice, which should be held at least two half days of each week. However, from many years' experience with competitions, I believe that a very large majority of rifle and revolver shots have concluded that it is very easy to overdo the practice before going into the match; in other words, nearly all competitors shoot too much, and by this get their nerves into a condition which is far from conducive to good shooting. A man should shoot enough with full charges to become accustomed to the recoil of his weapon and its elevation. After this is done it will be found far more advantageous to put in his time in training his muscles to be steady in holding his rifle or revolver."

Training the Muscles.

"The training of the muscles can be done much better, more effectively, and more economically by using dummy cartridges than by firing full charges. Men who intend to enter a match should devote about two hours each day to holding the rifle and pulling the trigger in the three positions. It is not desirable to do this in two consecutive hours, but to make three or four trials at it each day as may be found most convenient. A man should not be allowed to fire a shot until he gets his muscles in such a state as to be steady in holding the rifle in the prescribed positions."

While the War Department understands that the question of sending a team to the national match is largely one of expense money, it is believed that every State and Territory should be able to spare from its appropriation of the annual Federal appropriation for this purpose. The information gained at these competitions is believed to be worth to the States many times the amount of money it will cost to be represented by a team.

Press Match a Feature.

In view of the great interest taken by the newspapers of the country in rifle shooting, the committee on publicity has arranged with the National Rifle Association to have this year a "press match." The prize to be given will be a handsome trophy, probably from Tiffany & Co., of New York, and will become the property of the winner. The conditions of the match will provide that any newspaper man connected with any of the teams participating in the national matches or other matches at Sea Girt, or regularly assigned to Sea Girt as a correspondent, or coming to Sea Girt especially to participate in this match, will be eligible to contest in the press match."

Foundry Easily Leads Sunday School Batters

Has Start of 31 Points Over Calvary—Ballenger Best Individual With .577—Lord Best of Base Runners.

Ballenger, of Sixth, is the leader of the Sunday School League hitters, with the juicy average of .577 for seven games. Ball, of the same team, connected safely with the ball in his one time up, and Quantrell has .600 for two games.

Foundry leads Calvary by 31 points and Fifth is about the same distance in the rear of Calvary. The leaders in team batting have an even century of runs or an average of ten per game, and Ninth, at the other end of the average ladder, has amassed as many as 37 runs in the same number of games.

Calvary leads in stolen bases and Lord, of that team, heads the league with 12. Clear, of Calvary, and Bishop, of Foundry, are tied at 15 for the honor of scoring the greatest number of runs.
